AMERICAN GLASS.

Manufactories in England Established Over a Century Ago.

Northward in Massachusetts as early as 1639. John and Ananias Conklin made bottles in Salem. There is no further record until after the revolution. Then, in July, 1787—a century ago—a man named Hunnewell, having two associates, received from the Legislature a charter conferring exclusive monopoly of the manufacture for fifteen years. The fine for infringement was £500, the stock was exempt of taxation and the workmen of military duty. This enterprise took the name of the Boston Crown Glass company of Essex street.

From the first it succeeded, making better window glass than the imported. The neighboring colonies early woke to envy, and many of the workmen were enticed away by flattering offers. All that came to succeed in New England was the outgrowth of the Essex street factory, workmen going to Berkshire in 1812, and to Keene, N. H., in 1814. In New York two Dutchmen, Smedes and Bamber, are said to have made glass prior to 1766, but the first permanent manufacture was near Albany, thirty years after.

Mr. Hunnewell, of the Boston factory, "had no favor-look toward Albany or Vermont," but having turned his attention and some of his capital to Suncock, N. H., he was almost simultaneously attracted to Connecticut. This was in 1787, the year when he secured the Bay State monopoly, and he seems to have coveted more monopolies. In New York such things were not encouraged, but in Connecticut there had been at different times in forty years "special grants of exclusive privileges," all however, becoming void from the patentees failing to fulfil the stated conditions. Hunnewell, "attracted of the good sand that way," set his mind on addressing the Legislature of Connecticut, but the enterprising people recognizing that if there was money in their sand-beds for the Bostonian, there was equally as much for them, blocked Master Hunnewell's schemes by entering upon the manufacture themselves. It is altogether probable that jealousy of the Bostonian incited the opening up of the industry, and at any rate in 1787-88 one glass-house was put in operation in Hartford, and another in New Haven. It is not improbable that among the men enticed away from the Boston factory were those who went to Connecticut to start this industry. Success followed, and in 1789 Washington alludes in his diary to "The Connecticut Glass."—Dr. W. H. Morse, in Hartford Times.

USES OF THE ROOF.

The Social Capabilities of New York City's House-Tops.

By slow degrees the people of New York are realizing the social capabilities of their house-tops. In the tenement-house quarters, where stress of climate drives the inmates to seek every breath of air available during the summer heats, the roof has long been made use of, though in a rude and primitive way, as a dormitory. A few far-sighted capitalists in erecting tall buildings down-town have perceived the many advantages of the roof, and have prepared it for enjoyment. One theater has found its profit in putting a garden and promenade on its uppermost story, and many private house-owners have become familiar with the retreat to their roofs as a relief from torridity and used-up air. But no systematic acceptance of the house-top as an important adjunct to comfort has occurred, and the fact only shows the force of conservatism. The summer climate of New York is quite as hard to bear as that of most Oriental cities, and the custom of spending many hours upon the house-top has obtained in the latter for ages. In Eastern countries nearly all sleeping is done upon the roofs, and parts of most evenings are spent there by the majority. At night in such towns it often looks as though the population had retired from the streets to the house-tops bodily.

They eat and smoke and lounge and chat there. The wealthier people put up convenient awnings, with curtains and cushions, and enjoy the cool night breezes. The poor live quite as much on the tops of their houses if not with such luxurious appointments. With us one serious drawback is that so many of our roofs are not adapted to such uses, and that they are in fact built closely on the model of cold-climate domiciles. In the course of time there is no reason to believe that some change for the better will take place. We have certainly ample need for the Oriental roof, flat and free from obstructions, and it would cost no more to build them so than in the old-fashioned style. By the erection of awnings an immense space could thus be utilized, and in even the hottest weather the temperature of the house-top would be several degrees lower than inside the buildings. The advantage of adopting this habit to the children alone would be incalculable, and especially for the children of the poor, who are literally slaughtered by the summer heat in the dreadfully close and confined tenement-house rooms. A very little expenditure would enable the mothers to use the roofs for dormitories all through the summer, and the custom once introduced its inherent benefits could be depended upon to establish it firmly.—N. Y. Tribune.

VEGETABLE REMEDIES.

A Claim That They Are Doing More Harm Than Mineral Drugs.

Regarding the so-called purely vegetable remedies, there is a curious superstition in the lay mind that all vegetable remedies are comparatively harmless, while mineral substances are much more injurious to the human economy. This prejudice, perhaps, originated some fifty years ago, when the public and the profession began to realize that there was too much giving of antimony and mercury. It always received moral support from the old women, who only knew how to brew herbs, and feared what they did not understand. Besides, vegetable medication belongs to the childhood of the human race.

The use of mineral drugs is the result of scientific knowledge and the general advance of civilization. It is no wonder, therefore, that it has been regarded with suspicion by the ignorant. But the fact is, the prejudice is entirely without foundation. At the present time, a list of poisons used as drugs will show a great preponderance of the vegetable kingdom. We have, for example, such universally consumed substances as alcohol, tea, coffee and tobacco. These "purely vegetable substances" alone do a hundred fold more to poison and deteriorate the human system than do the whole mineral pharmacopoeia. But besides these, we have opium, Indian hemp, and the whole seductive list of "purely vegetable" narcotics.

By far the most powerful poisons to the system are of purely vegetable origin. Such, for example, is curarine, which produces its effects in doses of a hundred thousandth of a grain, and strychnine, of which a solution containing one part to ten million of water will kill the exposed heart of a frog. The most subtle and evasive of poisons is the active principle of the "purely vegetable" digitalis purpurea, while strychnine has probably poisoned more animals and human beings than any drug but arsenic. Take it as a rule, therefore, the most violent poisons, and the substances which produce the most deleterious effects on the human system, are from the vegetable kingdom.

The mineral drugs which may cause harm are few in number, and, if we except arsenic, are not especially violent poisons. There is a considerable amount of poisoning from lead, but not through its medicinal use, and the same may be said of the present use of mercury. In fine, it is the purely vegetable drugs which are the most dangerous, because it is these which stimulate the brain or numb the senses, induce morbid habits, and eventually establish physical degeneration. We wish that the public could be made to understand this when it is confronted with alluring notices of the perfect harmlessness of "purely vegetable" drugs.—Medical Record.

IT REQUIRES NERVE.

A Thrilling Incident Related by a London Dealer in Wild Beasts.

Many a youth makes queer resolutions as to what he would like to be and to do, from reading "flash" literature, or from listening to rose-colored descriptions from those who know as little as himself, because they have imbibed their knowledge from the same sources. Then, again, there are many people who, in telling their adventures, forget the real and draw on their imagination. A touch of reality often dissipates these glowing visions in a young fellow's mind very quickly, as it did once in an incident related by Mr. Cross, the London dealer in wild beasts.

I received from a young Frenchman of good family several letters by which he requested leave to enter the lions' den at my receiving house in Earle street. He assured me that his vocation was that of a lion-tamer. And one fine day he paid me a visit, in company with three of his companions, whom he had brought with him in order that they might be witnesses of his intrepidity. He asked me if I could give him a situation, and pointing to a cage in which there were three fine African lions, he entreated me to allow him to put them through a performance. I had just time to tell him that he might enter at his own risk when I was called into the office. After the lapse of a quarter of an hour a man rushed up to the desk where I was writing and exclaimed, excitedly, "Mr. Cross, one of the lions is out!"

"When?" I asked, to which he replied, "Lose in the building!"

On hurrying to the spot I found the door of the den open, and the Frenchman inside with his back against the wooden partition, and two of the lions staring him in the face, while the escaped lion had made for the end of the narrow pass-ages, where it was meditating mischief to the other Frenchmen, who had taken refuge on the top of a pile of boxes, their faces as white as a sheet. The first thing I did was to close the door leading to the yard, and the next to get the amateur lion-tamer out of the den. It was well for him that one of the lions had got out of the cage, because the other two were so amazed at the fact that they remained for a minute or two perfectly still. We had great difficulty in making the third lion re-enter the den, but at last we succeeded, not, however, without some danger. After this had been done I myself went into the cage with no weapon, and simply smoking a cigar. My entrance was the signal for tremendous bounding backward and forward on the part of the beasts, which were evidently not a little terrified at one of their companions having escaped. As I stood calmly within the den with my eyes fixed on the excited animals, I said: "You see there is no art in lion-taming, but it requires nerve."

I think the result of that afternoon's adventure quite cured the young Frenchman of his mania for being a lion-tamer.—Youth's Companion.

A GREAT MISTAKE

has heretofore been made in the treatment of rheumatism, neuralgia, and nervous or sick headache. This is evidenced by the failure on the part of thousands of sufferers to find relief, even though they have exhausted the skill of various physicians and tried numerous so-called remedies. To such Athlophoros is offered as a safe, sure, and quick cure. Its success has been phenomenal, and yet it is not surprising because it will do all that is claimed for it. The Athlophoros Co. will gladly refer any who desire to make an investigation to reliable parties who have been cured by it.

J. E. Gillespie, Real Estate and Loan Agent, at Atlantic, Iowa, says: "My rheumatism first appeared in the hip, and then extended down into the legs through the sciatic nerve. I suffered whether standing or sitting, and it was with the greatest of difficulty that I succeeded in hobbling to my office each day. I consulted physicians, also tried every remedy I could learn of, without any good effects whatever. My great fears were that I would always have it. As I was writing a letter to this friend in Chicago, I casually made note of my rheumatism, and thought no more about it. But my letter was answered very promptly, telling me to use Athlophoros; also stating his mother's case and cure which was more severe than mine. I at once purchased a bottle and by the time I had finished taking it, my rheumatism was gone. I was a little too quick to stop, it had not gone entirely out of my system. I had another little attack, but another bottle of Athlophoros did the work. It has now been over a year since, and I consider it an excellent medicine, and have recommended it to others."

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

For liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, indigestion, weakness, nervous debility, diseases of women, constipation, headache, impure blood, &c., Athlophoros Pills are unequalled. 11
